Hike Dove Mountain Special in the AZ Republic by Roger Naylor

10:17 a.m. MST December 26, 2014

Nothing about the approach to the Tortolita Mountains promises a memorable hiking experience.

I exit Interstate 10 in Marana, north of Tucson. As I drive east on Tangerine Road, I'm pointed directly at the Santa Catalina Mountains, an imposing wall of ragged peaks crowned with pine forests. Then the road bends toward a small cluster of desert hills and my expectations drop. Things don't look any more promising when I turn on Dove Mountain Road. I roll past one upscale community after another. This does not seem like a portal to wild country.

The final turn takes me to the grounds of Ritz-Carlton, Dove Mountain. I wasn't sure what sort of reception my dusty pickup and I would receive as I stopped at the entry station and said I was just there to hike. Yet the guy could not have been nicer. He offered a trail map and gave me directions to the trailhead parking lot.
