Roadway designers presented their plans at a public meeting March 15th in Marana. They're recommending the widening begin in 2015 at La Canada Drive and extend west to Thornydale Road. When that work is complete, probably in 2017, the section from Thornydale to west of Dove Mountain Boulevard will be constructed. The design will follow the pattern set by the segment from First Avenue to La Canada--four lanes with a raised, landscaped median and a bicycle and pedestrian path.

West of Dove Mountain/Twin Peaks Road, plans call for a four lane roadway with a depressed median which is a typical design for a more rural area. Construction isn't scheduled until 2022 or later.

$74 million has been budgeted for the work by the four sponsoring agencies: Regional Transportation Authority, towns of Oro Valley and Marana and Pima County. The dips in Tangerine Road will be leveled and drainage facilities built to handle storm runoff. The culverts and bridges also will accommodate wildlife crossings.

The final design will be presented at a public meeting next fall.
